Carnelian Bay is situated about 2½ miles south-east of Scarborough. It is a charming little break in the cliff line with a tiny pebbly beach. This beach is its great attraction, for hither the visitor to the Yorkshire coast finds his way in search of carnelians, moss-agates, jaspers and other stones of a like nature which may be found when the water has rededed.

Many thanks for birthday card. Hope you enjoyed your visit to Leeds & got out into the country this week. Had a v. nice peeled of much better. Hope you have quite recovered.
The weather is glorious. Isn't not know why people grumble because it is so cold.
Best wishes. George & Lottie.
